THE TIGER,S LEAP.

The English ship Cremona was on the eve of leaving Calcutta on hes homeward bound passage. The starboard anchor hung at the cat-head, and the other was already a-peak—the sails hung in graceful festoons from the clewlines and buntlines, the studdingsail gear was all rigged, the topsail halyards were cleared ready for running, and all that the good ship waited for was the presence of Mr. Bowditch, the owner, who was going home in her.

At length Mr. Bowditch came, accompanied by his daughter Mary, a girl of some thirteen years of age, and two Malay servants. Most of his luggage had been on board for several days; but on the present occasion he brought off a huge box, which he desired to have very carefully taken over the side: after all was safe and snug, and the old ship fairly under headway, the men learned that the great box contained no more nor no less than a large Bengal tiger.

At any time the immediate neighborhood of the royal tiger wears an atmosphere anything but pleasant, but when the neighborhood is bounded by the narrow confines of shipboard, it is reasonable to suppose that some anxiety at least may be exercised on the occasion. Some of the sailors on board the Cremona were rather inclined to superstition—not more so, perhaps, than the common run of sailors—and under the peculiar circumstances of the present case they found plenty of food for superstitious dread; but then the thing was done, and it couldn't be undone—the tiger was on board, and they concluded that they must make the best of it

One man in particular, by the name of White, experienced the utmost dread of the forest tyrant, and no assurance on the part of those who felt perfectly secure could set his mind at ease.

The cage was in the hold, directly beneath the main hatchway; and ever and anon, as the deep savage growl of the royal Bengal tiger came up like the rumbling of an earthquake from the bowels of the ship, White would start back from his occupation, whatever it might be, and tremblingly stand, like one thunderstruck, till the noise had ceased.

Not many weeks before, White had been one of a party who went up the Hoogly as far as Burdwan after a boat load of ivory; and on their return, as they were stopping at a spring which bubbles up on the edge of a large jungle just above Chinsura, the party were startled by the cry, "The tiger! the tiger!" which came from one of the native guides.

The water buckets were dropped, and all hands rushed for the boat; but just as White placed his right foot over the bows, a piercing shriek sounded in his ear; and on turning he beheld, just beyond the spring, and on the edge of the thick jungle, his only brother, a youth not more than sixteen years of age, within the fatal grasp of the tiger.

The ill-fated boy gave one more cry, and then the sharp fangs of the brute monarch closed upon his throat, and the purple life tide went forth from a heart that soon ceased beating.

"This is the ship of death!" said White, as Captain Langdon tried to assure him that there could possibly be no danger; "the spirit of death is on board the Cremona, and woe be to him who feels its cold gripe."

"I thought you had got over your fright," said Captain Langdon in return, as White let go of the wheel with the right hand and drew the sleeve of his jacket across his eyes.

"Fright, sir!" answered the hardy sailor, as he raised his eye from the compass and regarded his commander with a mournful look; "was it a fright, sir, to have an only brother sacrificed to the tiger demon? to have left that boy's bones to whiten beneath the heathen sun of Bengal? Oh, sir, I saw that boy's face as it seemed turned with mute supplication up towards the spotted Satan, and I heard his agonizing cry for mercy as the firey balls of the monster gleamed upon him: and—oh, heaven!—I saw that monster's long, white fangs, as they settled into the tender flesh of my brother's neck, and I knew that he was slaking his fiendish thirst from the fountain of a life that was worth more to me than all the world beside. Call it not a fright, sir—think me not foolish that I weep thus for my brother. The fiend is with us now! The tiger demon is upon our deck, and I know that there shall be one death the more now that he has come."

As White ceased speaking, the low growl of the tiger came rumbling up from the hold, and for a season the poor man could muster scarcely strength enough to steady the ship's helm

Captain Langdon walked thoughtfully forward, and even he could not help wishing that Mr. Bowditch had chosen some other mode of conveyance for the tiger. Had it been a young animal, the case would have been different; but the tiger was full grown, of powerful build, and withal not over a month from his native jungle, where he was captured by a large party of hunters, of which Mr. Bowditch was a member; and partly as a trophy of his own prowess, and partly as a subject of curiosity, he had determined to take it home with him.

The ship pursued her course for some weeks with nothing to break the usual xuiet of a pleasant sea voyage; and even till after she doubled Good Hope everything went on well, if we may except the slight uneasiness occasioned by the frequent howlings of the dreadful occupant of the hold, and even that caused no alarm, save in the breast of Harry White.

It was a pleasant afternoon, after the ship had entered the trade winds; the sheets and tacks and the braces remained just as they had been belayed forty-eight hours before, and the sky was as clear and cloudless as an infant's heart. The captain and the owner stood abaft the wheel, Harry White had the helm, and most of the men were hanging about the deck, while little Mary Bowditch, as blithe and happy as an uncaged lark, was sporting among the coils of rigging that hung from the fife-rail. For several hours the tiger had been unusually restive, and at the present moment was sending forth the most dismal howlings, which at length rose to such a pitch that little Mary started away from her usual playing ground and crept up to the side of her father.

"Come here, Kouli," said Mr. Bowditch, addressing one of his Malay servants who stood near the starboard gangway; "what is the matter with the tiger?"

Kouli answered unhesitatingly:

"He wants the light and fresh air, sir."

"Then let him have it," said Mr. Bowditch. And turning to the captain he continued, "Will you have your men hoist the cage on deck?"

Captain Langdon gave consent to this request; and in a few moments a button was rigged to the mainstay and hooked into the stout lashings of the cage, when the men seized the rope and easily swayed the large grated box upon the deck.

The cage was composed of stout teaks wood, strongly bolted and barred, the front being entirely open, save the iron rods that ran perpendicularly from the top to the bottom; it fronted towards the bulwarks, so that the men might pass by the opposite side of the deck without disturbing the inmate.

For some time the tiger seemed much pleased with the change of his situation, which he manifested by the peculiar manner in which he snuffed up the fresh air and lashed about his tail; but in the course of about fifteen minutes his lashing ceased, and soon afterwards all within the cage became as quiet as the grave.—Whenever a long continued silence is suddenly broken by some unexpected tearing, rushing noise, the heart naturally beats quicker and stronger, and the nerves are strung by unwonted excitement; but when a continuous roar, which has for days carried terror upon its very sound, suddenly ceases, and leaves a solemn stillness in the atmosphere, thon it is that the heart experiences its most fearful change; for while one is exciting and nerving in its very nature, the other is enervating an oppressive.

Thus it was on board the Cremona. In the strange silence which followed the ceasing of the monster's movements, there was something at once startling and oppressive, and more than one brave heart sank a degree lower. A fearful suspicion had taken possession of the men as they had seen the cage hoisted on deck; the perpendicular bars did not seem to be strong enough! They had not seen them before, for when the cage was hoisted on board it was entirely closed up; but though each held the suspicion yet no one dared to give the thought utterance. Harry White's heart sank for a moment; but he instinctively loosened the heavy sheath knife by his side, and then seized the wheel with a firmer grasp.

For three minutes this silence lasted. Not a word had been spoken, only the men looked at each other with ominous shakes of the head, and then seemed to think of defence. At the end of three minutes a sound was heard from the cage as though its occupant was drawing a long, half-stifled breath, and in a moment more was followed by a slight rubbing against the back of the wood work and a gentle gathering of the feet.

For the first time the Malay started back and trembled; and then, in the sharp, quick cry of the jungle hunter, he exclaimed:

"The tiger! the tiger!"

But Kouh Thesan spoke too late; for, simultaneous with his own cry, there sounded a low howl from the cage—a deep scratch of the firm set claws, a crashing of the iron bars, one against the other—and the royal Bengal tiger stood unbound upon the deck!

With one leap he had passed between the bars of the cage and cleared a distance of several yards. For some time—it seemed an age of chaos to those who watched him—the tiger lay crouched where he first alighted; and while he lashed his sides with his tail, he rolled his eyes round upon the crew. At length he seemed to fasten upon a single object, and as he lowered his huge head almost to the deck, he gathered himself for a spring

The little Mary, as she tremblingly nestled to her father's side, was the object upon which the tiger had set his fatal eyes; and with a slight stifled cry of anguish Mr. Bowditch gathered her to his bosom and clasped his arms tightly around her. But the terrible animal seemed to take no notice of the movement, other than to raise his eyes to the elevated position of the child and draw his legs for a firmer leap.

Captain Langdon thought of the guns, but through what certainly appeared to be gross carelessness, there was not one of them loaded. A thousand thoughts may have flashed across the minds of the men, but for the moment they stood in a body, like so many statues; and ere the captain could give an order or the men find presence of mind to secure the means of defence, all eyes were turned from the crouching tiger to the person of Harry White.

He had lashed the helm and drawn his long sharp knife from his sheath. A piece of tarpaulin was wound round his left arm, and with his face as white as marble he strode ont upon the quarter deck.

For an instant he stood still. Not a muscle moved in his whole system, but the fire which flashed from his eyes was as bright and sparkling as that which shone in the orbs of the beast before him.

'Back, Harry, back!" shouted Captain Langdon. "Here come loaded muskets. Stand back and let the men fire."

"Keep your bullets till you need them," returned White, without moving his eyes from the tiger; "I—I must do my duty first! There is blood upon the demon that calls to me for vengeance. See—see those hell-sent fangs that drank my brother's life away—how they glisten and shine! Brother, brother, you shall be avenged!"

As he spoke, in accents of almost maniac madness, his body swayed to and fro for an instant, and then, just as the tiger strained his nerves for the fatal leap, he raised his knife high in the air and rushed madly forward.

The gleaming eyes of the beast caught the approaching form; and with a low premonitory growl, the muscles relaxed their strained tension, and the tiger raised himself upon his haunches.

The white fangs glistened horribly within the blood-like lips and the raised paw revealed the fearful armament of sharp hooked claws. All hands on board would have risked much to save the maddened man, but he was too quick for them, and every heart ceased its beatings as they saw the avenger start forward.

The rays of the setting sun gleamed an instant on the uplifted blade, and on the next it was buried in the side of the monster; but ere it was drawn forth, those long fangs had settled upon the canvass covering on the left arm, and upon the instant a sharp grating was heard as the bone cracked and splintered beneath the meeting jaws. Again and again descended the knife, and as each stroke opened some new passage for the monster's blood that huge paw found its hold in the quivering flesh of Harry White.

The men rushed forward, and would fain have rescued their shipmate from his self-sacrifice; but ere they came the two combatants had rolled over together upon the gore-stained deck.

In one dark stream mingled the blood of the tiger and the man. Harry White had struck his last blow, and the knife was buried to its heft in the heart of the beast, from whence he who struck it thither had not the power draw it forth.

"You may touch them, if you please," said Kouli Thasan, as he regarded the fearful scene; "but all the power on earth cannot loose the death gripe of the tiger. His claws are set like iron into the sides of his victim, and till his eyes close his muscles will not relax."

But the spectators had not long to wait, for scarcely had the Malay ceased speaking when the royal brute gave one fierce struggle, and then the giant paws laid powerless upon the body of the devoted sailor—his huge jaws settled back, and his head fell like leaden weight upon the deck. The royal tiger was dead! Little Mary was safe—the men were safe, and oh, how every heart beat with joy as the truth was known. Harry White still breathed the breath of life.

There was one death the more from the tiger's presence on board the ship: but 'twas the life of the beast only that went out to fulfill the prophecy, for Harry White still lives. To be sure, he has lost an arm, and the deep marks of the tiger's claws are left to tell the tale of that fearful struggle; but he lives, and from the bounty of Mr. Bowditch he enjoys an independence from the wants of this physical world.

Near Windsor, on the beautiful Thames, is a small red cottage, and the owner may be seen on any pleasant evening, with his pipe in his mouth, sitting on his porch in a large arm-chair, which is covered with a huge tiger's skin. That man is Harry White; and if you wish to see his eyes sparkle beneath their heavy lashes, just ask him to tell you about the "Tiger's Leap."

The Ku Klux Klan Exposed.

CITY HOTEL,
(Which is in New Orleans,)
April 11.

I have joined 'em. I am a K. K. K. Feller. I run the risk of dying some day (or night), but I am going to unbosom myself and make a public expose of the K, K. K.'s Pro bono publico.

Once upon a time, when night had spread her sable mantilla o'er the earth, and pinned it with a moon, I went to bed. People often go to bed at night, with the exception of the K. K. K.'s, who never go to bed and who never sleep. They have ears, but they see not; they have eyes, but they hear not.

The clocks on the cupola of the Crescent office had tolled forth the hour of twelve; the stuffed owl in the Crescent City Museum had gone to rest; the statue of Henry Clay reposed in silence in a perpendicular position; the snakes had ceased their croaking, and the frogs their biting, the musquitoes had begun humming, "and all went merry as a marriage belle"—to her hash! I was sleeping in my couch of couches like a June bug in January, but I did not snore. I never snore. Everybody would do it, I presume, if it was fashionable. But to resume.

As I said, it was past midnight, and I was dreaming of my country seat, (a stool with three legs,) when I was startled suddenly by a cold, clammy, shrimpy hand upon my forehead. I awoke and rose up in bed to discover a figure clothed in white sitting upon my bed. He (I suppose he was a he) held in his right hand a Roman candle burning blue, and in his left a skyrocket; his eyes were glaring balls of red fire, and he had two horns in his forehead, besides several which he had taken in his mouth. As I awoke he waived the torch three times around his head and beckoned, like Hamlet's ghost, for me to follow him. I arose from my bed and followed, entirely in white! He led me through winding streets, up dark alleys, and finally brought me to a graveyard. All this time he had never, for a moment, taken his eyes of fire off me. Arrived in the centre of the graveyard, beside an unburied skeleton between two thorn bushes, he shot off his rocket, and glaring upon me, said:

"Mortuary mortal, I come from the bloody den of the bob-tailed scorpions. I am "the chiefest among 10,000, and the 1 altogether lovely.' You see before you the specter of the Great Tribe of the Demoniac Deathly Dragons. I am sent to warn, to defy, to drag you to danger. 3ice the scorpion's tongue has hissed; 3ice the dirge of death is done; 3ice the bloody grave has gaped! Behold!"

I looked, and saw in letters of blood upon the skeleton before me, and surrounded by letters of fire:

☞I AM DED!☜

(Illustrated by coffins and daggers.)

I gazed in horror, and exclaimed, in petrified accents: "I believe ye my boy!" and fainted.

When I recovered myself (and my wallet) I found that I was transported to a subterranean dungeon beneath terra firma. It had all the appearance of a place that was worse than The Place itself! There were blue lights, blue fellers and blue flames.

Even "the lights burned blue" The 4 going paragraph states that. Any paragraph going might state the same thing.

Brightly the "taller-dips" candles "shone o'er (thorongh) fare women and brave men!"

When I had been taken inside the dungeon, I felt that I was done! I was introduced to a hard crowd in hard times. They formed around me (the crowd and not the times), and in a deep sepulchral tone that shook the cave, said:

"Whence comes this mortuary mortal, and is he trooly rural?"

My conductor answered for me, and said in tones of thunder (and lightning):

"He can keep a hotel; he can sing like a martingale, swim like an angel, gamble on the green, and is loil to the corps!"

"Let him pass," said the tycoon, who thought I hadn't a "full hand."

I passed, and found myself in the inner chamber, where I saw nothing but thunder, the yells of demons and the rattling of chains; I heard nothing but lightning, the flash of gunpowder and the last ditch, and I dreamed the dream of the d(un)reary!

A mangled corpse stood upon a pyramid of skulls, and holding in his right hand a coffin and in his left hand a (pristine man) coughin' two, he exclaimed:

"Mortal, I am the Bloody Butcher of the Bogus Blunderers of Babylon. Swear to keep our secrets, or dye."

As I didn't care to dye, I swore.

Then I was tetotally surrounded by demons as looked like devils, not one of whom bought their shirts at Moody's, who shrieked:

"He swears by the fiery flagon found in ferocious furnaces by fellers from Feliciana that he does not, never did, and never will again, so help him Felis!"

I was then stabbed by a small sword, which was held in the hands of every demon in pantalets around me, then drugged, boiled in a caldron, set upon a hot grid iron, slid down a gang-plank, walked over cakes of ice, mutilated in the hair of my head, and finally tatooed and scalped!

I was dragged through tubular boilers to the tune of the "Rogue's March," stripped to the suit of clothes in which I was born, powdered to atoms, and told that I had a mission to perform to all outside barbarians—which is to annihilate every living thing, and to kill every decade member of society. I act seeded.

"Do you swear?"

"I swear."

I was then clothed with habiliments of woe, thrust into a den of worms with only one bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and told to await the action of the Impeachment Committee.

THE following recipe is worth $500 a year to a sheep farmer, and we have never seen it in print: If there is any life in the lamb, put it at once up to the head in a blood warm bath, adding more warm water as it cools. Keep it in this fifteen or twenty minutes, or "until it makes the water fly with its feet." Then wipe it dry and return it to its mother.

WHY is your nose in the middle of your face? Because it's the center.

What Frightened Meade.

There are many instances on record of brave men being scared to death nearly at the nearest trifle. Men who have been up to their armpits in blood, have dared the greatest perils, and reveled in the torture of humanity, are often awe stricken and shake like the aspen, at hearing the ominous tick, tick, tick, of the worm in wainscot.

General Meade has been in a terrible stew; he has had the night-sweats and the corkscrews over the terrible hobgoblins to be feared down South. We Wouldn't have his "feelins" for the world. What is it that Shakspeare says?

"Guilt makes cowards of us all."

Is that it? Shouldn't wondor if it had that effect. Bxt the

"Fe, fi, fo, fum,
"I smell the blood of an Englishman,
"Dead or alive I will have some,

that frightened children to sleep, in old times, was nothing at all, to the

that has scared mighty Generals and the great party of "mocal ideas" and "all the intelligence" into fits. If bad whiskey has anything to do with the Monde fever, we suggest to Congress to repeal the tax, and let our pious Generals and Freedmen's chaplain's have some "good old rye" at a little more reasonable price.

Here is what frightened Meade:

CATHOLIC AND PROTESTANT PRAYERS.—There is a difference between Catholics and Protestants in this matter of praying.—When a Protestant prays in public he is apt to hide his face and bend low in an awkward, uncomfortable attitude; and, when he would pray in private he retires to some secret place, where, if any one should catch him at it, he would blush like some guilty thing.—It is not so with our Roman Catholic brethren. They kneel, it is true, but the body above the knee is bolt upright, and the face is never hidden; and as if this were not enough, they make certain movements of the hand which distinctly announce their purpose to every beholder. The same freedom and boldness are observable in Catholic children when they say their nightly prayers. Your little Protestant buries its face in the bed and whispers its prayer to the counterpane; but our small Catholic brethren and sisters kneel upright, make the sign of the cross, and are not in the least ashamed or disturbed if any one sees them. Another thing strikes a Protestant spectator of Catholic worship—the whole congregation, without exception, observe the etiquette of the occasion. When kneeling is in order all kneel; when it is the etiquette to stand all stand; when the prayer book says bow every head is low. These two peculiarities are cause and effect. A Protestant child often has some reason to doubt whether saying its prayers is, after all, "the thing," since it is aware that some of its most valued friends and relations do not say theirs.—Atlantic Monthly.

RATTY ARTICLE BY JOSH BILLINGS.—Rats originally came from Norway, and I wish they had originally staid there.

They are as uncalled for as a pain in the small of the back.

They can be domesticated dreadful easy—that is, as far as getting in cupboards and eating cheese and gnawing pie is concerned.

The best way to domesticate them that I ever saw is to surround them gently with a steel trap; you can reason with them then so great advantage.

Rats are migratorious—they migrate to wherever they have a mind.

Pizen is also good for rats; it softens their nature.

Cats hate rats, and rats hate cats, and—who don't?

I suppose there is between fifty and sixty millions of rats in America—I quote now only entirely from memory—and I don't suppose there is a single necessary rat in the whole lot. This shows at a glance how many waste rats there is. Rats enhance in numbers faster than shoe pegs do by machinery. One pair of healthy rats is all that any man wants to start the rat business with, and in ninety days, without any outlay, he will begin to have rats to turn off.

Rats, viewed from any platform you can build, are unspeakably cussid.

WHY is an unbecoming action like the letter G? Because it's in elegant.

FOR AUDITOR GENERAL:

HON. CHARLES E. BOYLE,

Of Fayette County.

FOR SURVEYOR GENERAL:

GEN. WELLINGTON H. ENT,

Of Columbia County.

THE absence of the editor will account for his failure to reply this week, (if indeed reply he will,) to the highly grammatical and offensively egotistical effusion from the great "I Am" of the Johnstown Tribune, contained in the last issue of that paper.

THE final vote on the impeachment of the President, which was to have been taken on last Tuesday, has been postponed until Saturday, the 16th inst.—Had the vote been taken at the time set, there is not a shadow of doubt that the President would have been acquitted: hence a few more days of grace are called for by the Radicals in which to brow-beat, intimidate and corrupt honest Senators into voting for conviction. The acquittal of the President, however, is almost certain.

The Impeachment Trial.

The impeachment farce has at last been brought to a close. The concluding speech against the President was made by John A. Bingham of Ohio, who, if Benjamin F. Butler is to be believed, acquired an immortality of infamy by mainly procuring the hanging of an innocent woman, Mrs. Surratt. There are various opinions expressed as to the result. The Radical press speak confidently of the President's conviction and his deposition from office, while on the other hand a good deal of confidence is expressed that there are Senators honest enough and sufficiently mindful of the sanctity of their oaths to prevent a conviction by the necessary two-third vote. When the Senate adjourned on Wednesday last until Monday it was understood that the final vote would be taken on Tuesday of the present week. We, therefore, expect to be able, before our paper goes to press, to announce the result.

That there is any evidence whatever upon which to convict the President is not seriously pretended by any one who is at all familiar with the history of the trial. It is a bald, unblushing, shameless attempt to accomplish a long desired political purpose through the mere form of law, against all decency and against every principle of justice. Future generations will stand amazed at the unparalled impudence with which the proceeding was inaugurated and has been carried through. And yet this impeachment trial is the logical and necessary result of Radical legislation for the last two years. The history of the legislation of the last and present session of Congress, during that period, bears a wonderfully striking parallel to the acts of usurpation of the infamous Rump Parliament in England which tried and beheaded Charles I. in 1648, or of the still more execrable National Assembly of France which impeached and decapitated Louis XVI. in 1793. A majority of the Radical Senators had condemned Andrew Johnson before the trial began, and thus committed deliberate perjury when they took the oath to try the case according to the evidence. It is well known, however, that quite a number of opposition Senators, who have some regard for their own reputations, as well as for the obligations of an oath, have not thus committed themselves in advance, and will vote according to their conscientious convictions of duty. Upon this class of Senators a tremendous pressure has been brought to bear in order to force them into the ranks for conviction. Appeals the most shameless have been made to them, and threats the most bitter have been hurled against them, in order to frighten them from their propriety. The final vote will show with what success these scandalous efforts of the Radical revolutionists has been attended, and whether it is true, as has often been affirmed, that all official virtue and integrity have long since disappeared from the Radical ranks in the Senate Chamber.

In connection with this subject we append below the conclusion of Mr. Stanberry's speech in defence of Mr. Johnson. It is an eloquent and touching tribute, by one who speaks of what he knows, to the honesty, firmness and patriotism of the President:

"And now, Senators, I have done with the law and the facts of the case. There remains for me, however, a duty yet to be performed—one of solemn import and obligation—a duty to my client, to my former chief, to my friend. There may be those among you, Senators, who cannot find a case of guilt against the President. There may be those among you, who, not satisfied that a case for impeachment has yet arisen, are fearful of the consequences of an acquittal. You may entertain vague apprehensions that flushed with the success of acquittal the President will proceed to acts of violence and revolution. Senators, you do not know or understand the man. I cannot say that you willfully misunderstand him, for I, too, though never an extreme party man, have felt more than once, in the heat of party conflicts, the same bitter and uncompromising spirit that may now animate you. The time has been when I looked upon General Jackson as the most dangerous of tyrants. Time has been when, day after day, I expected to see him inaugurate a revolution; and yet, after his administration was crowned with success and sustained by the people, I lived to see him gracefully surrender his great powers to the hands that conferred them; and under the softening influences of time I came to regard him, not as a tyrant, but as one of the most honest and patriotic of men. Now, listen for a moment to one who perhaps understands Andrew Johnson better than most of you, for his opportunities have been greater. When nearly two years ago he called me from the pursuits of professional life to take a seat in his Cabinet I answered the call under a sense of public duty. I came here almost a stranger to him and every member of his Cabinet, except Mr. Stanton. We had been friends for many years. Senators, need I tell you that all my tendencies are conservative? You, Mr. Chief-Justice, who have known me for a third of a century, can bear me witness. Law, not arms, is my profession. From the moment I was honored with a seat in the Cabinet of Mr. Johnson not a step was taken that did not come under my observation, not a word was said that escaped my attention. I regarded him closely in Cabinet, and in still more private and confidential conversation. I saw him often tempted with bad advice. I know that evil counsellors were more than once around him. I observed him with intense anxiety. But never in word, in deed, in thought, in action, did I discover in that man anything but loyalty to the Constitution and the laws. He stood firm as a rock against all temptation to abuse his own powers, or to exercise those which were not conferred upon him. Steadfast and self-reliant in the midst of all difficulty, when dangers threatened, when temptations were strong, he looked only to the Constitution of his country and to the people. Yes, Senators, I have seen that man tried as few have been tried. I have seen his confidence abused. I have seen him endure day after day provocations such as few men have ever been called upon to meet. No man could have met them with more sublime patience. Sooner or later, however, I knew the explosion must come, and when it did come my only wonder was that it had been so long delayed. Yes, Senators, with all his faults the President has been more sinned against than sinning. The Constitution of the country is as safe in his hands from violence as it was in the hands of Washington. But if, Senators, you condemn him, if you strip him of the robes of office, if you degrade him to the utmost stretch of your power, mark the prophesy! The strong arm of the people will be about him. They will find a way to raise him from any depths to which you may consign him, and we shall live to see him redeemed and to hear the majestic voice of the people: "Well done, faithful servant, you shall have your reward." But if, Senators, as I cannot believe, but as has been boldly said with almost official sanction, your votes have been canvassed and the doom of the President is sealed, then let that judgment not be pronounced in this Senate Chamber; not here, where our Camillus, in the hour of our greatest peril, single-handed, met and baffled the enemies of the Republic; not here, where he stood faithful among the faithless; not here, where he fought the good fight for the Union and the Constitution; not in this chamber, whose walls echo with that clarion voice that, in the days of our greatest danger, carried hope and comfort to many a desponding heart, strong as an army with banners. No, not here. Seek out, rather, the darkest and gloomiest chamber in the subterranean recesses of this capitol, where the cheerful light of day never enters. There erect the altar and immolate the victim."

The Irish Church Question.

The third in the series of resolutions offered by Mr. Gladstone with reference to the Irish Church question, has been adopted by the House of Commons. It is in substance as follows: "That an address be presented by the House to her Majesty the Queen, humbly praying, that to prevent by legislation at this session, or by the creation of personal interests through the use of the public patronage, she would be graciously pleased to place at the disposal of Parliament her interest in the temporalities of all the dignities of the Church of Ireland." This makes Mr. Gladstone master of the situation. Disraeli has been fairly beaten on this issue. Refusing to resign, an appeal is now made to the Queen for a surrender of her interest in the temporalities of the Church into the hands of the representatives of the people. If she accedes to this request, Mr. Gladstone will have gained a most important point. If she refuses, then Disraeli must drop his sceptre, or Parliament be prorogued, and an appeal made to the people. This latter will be a dangerous game to attempt. The masses are now fully aroused by the eloquence of Mr. Gladstone, and the Church party will lose more than they will gain by a new election. There are rumors in some quarters that Disraeli will outbid Mr. Gladstone on Irish Church reform. As Disraeli, he may be prepared to adopt this coup d'etat; but as the representative of the Crown and the leader of the high Church party, this path is not open either for an advance or a retreat. He must stand or fall upon the issue now made up.

In the meantime the English Church party and the more prominent Tories are endeavoring to stem the current of reform by holding public meetings. St. James' Hall, London, was recently filled with the enemies of the bill for disendowing the Established Church in Ireland. The Archbishop of Canterbury occupied the chair, and the platform was crowded with the most prominent men of the Tory party. The Archbishop, on taking his position, made a speech in furtherance of the objects of the meeting. The Lord Mayor of London moved a series of resolutions in favor of the continued union of State and Church, which were seconded by the Bishop of Oxford. The Archbishop of York also presented resolutions to the effect that an attempt to overthrow the Irish Church was an attack upon the Church of England, and a movement toward the establishment of Papacy upon the country. There was much tumult and confusion at this point of the proceedings, but the resolutions were finally adopted, and the meeting adjourned.—Such action is too late. The stream of reform cannot be dammed by paper resolutions. Gladstone and Bright and their colleagues are bold, fearless, determined men, who cannot be turned from the path they have marked out by noise or menace. Behind them stand the people calling for a release from old burdens, and asking for rights that for centuries have been denied them. Will those rights be granted at this time? If not, justice will only be delayed. The right will triumph at last. —Phila. Age.

LETTER FROM ALTOONA.

ALTOONA, May 11, 1868.

FRIEND MAC—Last night about ten o'clock our citizens were again startled by the terifying cry of "Fire!" Its whereabouts were soon ascertained, for the very heavens appeared to be lighted up with the reflection. The stable of James Lowther, Esq., in the Fifth Ward, was first discovered to be on fire, and the hay loft being well stored with straw, the flames were as a consequence more terrific and harder to subdue. At one time it was feared there would be a general conflagration, but luckily the wind was calm, and the fire was finally overcome; not, however, until it had destroyed the building and its contents and communicated to the stable of Mr. John Negley, adjoining, which, with a large lot of hay contained in it, was also in a great measure consumed. In Mr. Lowther's stable there were four horses domiciled, but by the almost superhuman exertions of a number of our citizens three of them were rescued without injury—the fourth one perishing in the flames. There is no reason to doubt that these conflagrations were the work of incendiaries.

During the fire some nimble-fingered thief of the female presuasion busied herself in replenishing her scanty wardrobe at the expense of Mrs. Samuel Woodkok, the family being absent at the time. She found several valuable silk dresses and some twenty or thirty dollars in greenbacks, which she appropriated to her own behalf and behoof. No doubt she has been reading the life of the Massachusetts saint—the bag-jawed, cock-eyed spoon thief, Butler—and profiting by the shining examples of that "loil" worthy.

The Catholic Fair is still in progress, and our Baptist friends design opening one at Shannon's Hall this evening with a view to raising "spondulics" for their new church.

"Logan," the Altoona correspondent of the Philadelphia Mercury, is an entertaining, graceful and ready writer, and his descriptions of scenes and occurrences here are for the most part graphic and truthful, but I am apprehensive that he some times depends more on his own vivid imagination than on actual occurrences. For instance, in his last communication he says that the City Council came near impeaching our worthy Mayor. Now this in certainly a mistake, and it does not look well on paper for a Democratic correspondent of a Democratic journal to accuse a Democratic Council with even approximating to anything savoring of the impeachment of a Democratic Mayor. At least these are the views, Mr. "Logan," of your humble friend "T. I. M."

Want of space seems to have compelled you to curtail my last letter, thereby preventing me from "saying my say" about our new paper, the Altoona Vindicator. It is truly a vindicator of the fundamental principles of that Democracy whose history is the history of this once glorious country, from the adoption of its constitution until the dark days of Lincoln misrule and diabolism. I hope those good, sound and able editors, Campbell and Easly, will salivate the black and tan factionists until, politically speaking, their teeth shall fall from their sockets, then ears from their heads, and their tongues from their mouths, and that they will blister their spinal columns from the base of the cranium clear down to where the caudal appendages ought to grow, and then polish the denuded surfaces with a red hot brick. Yours &c., T. I. M.

ATROCIOUS BLASPHEMY.—We feel it a duty to protest against the horribly blasphemous language used by Mr. THADDEUS STEVENS in his speech on the impeachment case. We do not like to reprint it; yet it may be well to do so to fix it "on a gibbet of everlasting infamy." It may not be useless to remark that the author of this most deliberate and atrocious blasphemy is the person who introduced the curse of the infidel common school system into our State. We can only pray that the Blessed LORD, whom Mr. STEVENS sneeringly refers to as only "a single individual" may be a merciful and kind Judge to the old blasphemer. Here are the words in which the author of our school system expressed his low opinion of Him whom St. PAUL calls "GOD BLESSED FOREVER."

"Baser than the betrayal by Judas Iscariot, who betrayed only a single individual, Johnson sacrificed a whole nation," etc.

Mr. STEVENS is said to be a representative man. We hope that the Divine wrath will never visit either him or those whom he represents with the condign punishment of this horrible blasphemy.—Catholic Standard.

THE Roman Catholic Dean of Limerick, Dr. O'Brien, has recently written a letter to the Dublin Star maintaining that the exclusiveness of the Irish Established Church is the "firebrand" which causes dissensions among the people of Ireland. He says: "I spent some years in one of the North American colonies, and I know the social life of every one of them. I was the head of a college, and at the same time connected with the press. A unanimous vote of the Parliament—nine-tenths Protestant—gave my college a charter and an annual grant. My most intimate friends and acquaintances were Protestants. I numbered Protestant clergymen among my friends and sometimes my guests. I lectured frequently before societies exclusively Protestant, and I received from them many tokens of strong regard. And I have been now three and twenty years in my own country without speaking a dozen times to a Protestant clergyman, or sitting down in social intercourse with a Protestant twenty times."

—The Chicago Tribune does not take any stock in Dick Yates' promised reformation. It suggests that while reforming from the habit of inebriety will be a good thing, he has "other vicious personal habits equally debasing," which it will be necessary for him to reform before he arrives at respectability. Yates is a Radical, and Radical papers will be easily believed in any charge of viciousness against him.

LATE NEWS ITEMS.

—A tornado at Shanghai, Illinois, on Sunday, blew down fourteen houses, unroofed two churches, killed four persons and wounded about fifty others, some of whom will die.

—In a certain locality in Salem, Mass., there are now living six widows within a distance of sixty rods, besides half a dozen smart young ladies on the same street. A choice hunting-ground for marriageable youths.

—A Yankee schoolmaster, who was engaged in teaching the young Africans "how to shoot" and steal, and the old ones how to vote, in Pike county, Miss., eloped with a saddle-colored lady of that place a few days since.

—A man in Bridgeport, Conn., recently obtained a divorce without his wife's having received notice. A short time after the decree, the wife received notice that an estate in England, worth $90,000, had been devised to her by a relative.

—Donnelly's eulogy upon Grant, that he was like "one of these ancient warehouses of the old world, with floor above floor," would be immensely complimentary if it were not noticeable that in these same very lofty warehouses the upper story is generally vacant and "to let."

—Near Indianapolis, recently, a man who was detected in a criminal intimacy with his neighbor's wife, paid her husband $4,500 to prevent an exposure and law suit. The revenue officers got wind of the affair, and the recipient of the money was compelled to pay income tax upon it, and thus the shameful transaction leaked out.

—A Williamsport paper says a young man was recently discovered in an interior town done up in female toggery, engaged in the ravishing business of fitting ladies' corsets. He says he passed through Easton, Allentown, Reading, Pottsville, and other towns, and fitted corsets to several thousand ladies. Whew!

—A young man under the influence of the ardent tried to commit suicide at Allentown lately by hanging himself in a stable with a cow chain. He was discovered and foiled. He next hung himself with his handkerchief attached to a door knob, and was again cut down. He next laid himself down in a pig sty and wisely concluded not to shove off just yet.

—The New York Tones (Republican) thinks that if Andrew Jackson were in Andrew Johnson's place, with the army and navy at his command and the Democratic party at his back, impeachment would not be so quietly and tranquilly carried out. We guess if Andrew Johnson had the Democratic party of thirty years ago to back him he would show a bolder front.

—A Federal soldier, named Rob't Watson, who was a member of the Tenth Tennessee volunteers, and had lost a leg in the service of his country, was, some time since, discharged as watchman at the work-house, and the place is now occupied by a negro. This is the way men who fought for the best government the world ever saw are now treated by the party in power.—Nashville Gazette.

—There have been twenty-seven deaths thus far from the recent sad disaster on the Erie Railway, at Port Jervis. Thirteen injured persons remain at that place, all of them being expected to recover, whilst the other wounded have been conveyed to their homes. The Erie Railway Company has already settled quite a number of claims for injuries received in this accident, the amounts paid ranging from $30 as high as $10,000.

—A little child in Madison, Indiana, narrowly escaped drowning a few days ago. The mother having occasion to remove the lid of the cistern, accidentally let the bucket drop into it. She went for a pole to "hook it out," thoughtlessly leaving the place uncovered, and, on returning, proceeded to fish for the bucket, when lo, and behold! what should she draw up but her litte child, that had just tumbled down in her absence. It was saved.

—The violent rains in Kentucky and Tennessee have swollen the streams, covering thousands of acres of wheat and oats with from six inches to three feet of water. On Sunday, the 3d, eighty feet of embankment and a hundred and seventy feet of trestle work in the Cumberland mountains, on the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad, were washed away, and the track of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, near the former city, was piled for a distance of several miles with drift-wood.

—An infant son of Mr. W. W. Lamborn, residing near Lexington, Lafayette county, Mo., lost his life on the 20th ult., in a manner at once singular and sad. It appears that the child was playing about the fire place, and getting a small piece of burning coal in its mouth, before it could be removed, the coal passed into the windpipe, producing injuries from which it died in three days afterwards. The little fellow was thrown into fits by it, and could not be recovered, though the best medical aid was invoked.

—Mr. Clarence Logan, of Philadelphia, just returned from Savannah, having observed the election there, has made a statement that in one ward in that city, several negroes were supplied by a wag with labels of a "rat and roach exterminator," and voted them as ballots. Some of the very intelligent suffragans noticing a cut of a rat on the supposed ballot, asked what it meant. They were told it stood for the "rat-ification of the constitution." They wondered, believed, and voted. After this, who prates about educating voters, and who doubts that the colored troops fought nobly.

—A young lady resides with her mother in Duxbury, Massachusetts, in a lonely place a mile from any other habitation. At midnight they were recently awakened by an intruder getting in at the window. Miss B. rushed to the open window, seized the scamp by the throat, choking him while her mother beat him lustily about the head. The Amazonian gripe brought the scoundrel to terms, and he begged to be "let off" on the promise of skedaddling. On being released he made tracks for the woods. The night was very dark and rainy, so that his features could not be recognized.

WARRANTED CHEAPEST AND BEST!—To Farmers, Express Companies, Stage proprietors, Livery Establishments, and all who use Horses. DR. TOBIAS' VENETIAN LINIMENT, in pint bottles, at one dollar, for the cure of lameness, Scratches, Wind Galls, Sprains, Bruises, Splints, Galls, Cuts, Colic, Slipping Stifle, Overheating, Sore Throat, Naff in the Foot, &c.

PIANO FORTES.

Sole Manufacturers of Grand and Square Patent Monitor Plate Piano Fortes, with

DOUBLE IRON FRAME,

A COMPLETE PROTECTION AGAINST WET, COLD OR HOT CLIMATE.

(Patented February 29th, 1865.)

WARRANTED FOR FIVE YEARS.

Warerooms, 452 Broome St., New York.

The Patent Monitor Plate Pianos by their peculiar Construction are superior to all others, and their merit consists in the wrest plank being supported by the iron frame, allowing a larger space for the sounding board than is possessed by any other kind of Piano. By this means the quantity as well as the quality of the tone is largely increased.

These Pianos have been pronounced by the best judges to be unrivalled for Power and Sweetness of Tone, Easy and Agreeable Touch and Beauty of Finish.

Most flattering certificates of excellence from Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strakosch, Vieuxtemps, and a large number of the most distinguished Professors and Amateurs. From long experience and superior facilities for Manufacturing, we are enabled to offer our Pianos at as low prices as are asked by inferior makers.

MOVABLE COMB BEE HIVE!

Pronounced the best ever yet introduced in this County or State. Any person buying a family right can have them transferred from an old box into a new one. Several persons have had their boxes transferred, and they have proven satisfactory.

☞Messrs. Jos. W. Seese and D. P. Eversole say that they took of one Hive, in June, 1865, 48 pounds of honey, and in 1866, 624 lbs. and a swarm, and the bees had plenty to do them through the winter; in 1867, 80 lbs. of surplus honey was taken out.—Out of nine hives J. D. Kegarice took 365 lbs. of box honey in 1866.

ELIAS HOWE, JR. { Fabricants de Machines coudre exposant. / Manufacturer of Sewing Machines, Exhibitor.

The Howe Sewing Machines are celebrated for doing the best work, using a much smaller needle for the same thread than any other machines.

They are adapted to all kinds of Family sewing, and Manufacturing generally description, making a beautiful and perfect Stitch, a the same both sides of the article sewed, and will neither ravel nor rot.

Every Machine is as near perfection as the best machinery can be made to make it.

The parts being exactly alike, if any part needs to be repaired, the operator can replace it.

The New Improved Family Machine is without a rival, and cannot be surpassed in Beauty, Feller, Braider, Quilter and Gather as well as each Family Machine free of charge.

Buyers of Sewing Machines are earnestly cautioned to observe the Medallion Head of Howe, (Trademark) affixed to each Machine. Certain parties have taken advantage of similarity of name, and other equally dishonest devices to foist imitations on the Public as Howe Machines.

EDITORIALITIES, LOCAL AND GENERAL.—Mrs. Smith, wife of our friend and patron, Mr. James Smith, of Altoona, fell and broke her arm on Thursday last.

Twenty-one freight cars ran off the track at Summerhill, this county, on Friday, but sustained very little damage. No person was injured.

A young man named John Hawn committed suicide in Juniata township, Huntingdon county, on Wednesday last, by taking strychnine.

The new telegraph office at Conemaugh caught fire from an overheated stove, at an early hour on Monday morning, and building, instruments, etc., entirely destroyed.

The biographical sketch of the late Stephen Lloyd, Esq., which we were to insert this week, did not reach us until too late for publication, and has to lie over until our next issue.

This (Wednesday) morning is as cold, wet, stormy and disagreeable as might be vouchsafed to us in the depth of mid-winter. If this be May, then may we have no more such weather.

A Catholic school was opened in the chapel building, adjoining the church, in this place, on Tuesday, and quite a number of pupils are already in attendance. A young lady named Glass is the teacher.

The first ice cream of the season will be served up this (Wednesday) evening at R. R Thomas' saloon, High street, and will be as luscious and palatable, no doubt, as any heretofore furnished at that popular cafe.

A man named Haggerty, residing at Tyrone, was struck by the Phila. Express, at Tipton Station, on Friday, knocked under the wheels and run over, and was almost instantly killed He had just stepped from the way passenger train when the accident occurred.

Lloyd & Co.'s Bank has been removed to a room fitted up in the building recently purchased by Mr. Lloyd from Johnston Moore, Esq., opposite the Mountain House. Our young dental friend, Dr. D. W. Zegler, has taken the room vacated by Lloyd & Co. and fitted and furnished it in fine style as a dental office.

We had the misfortune to "pi" about half the type in one of our outside pages, the editor is absent, a host of advertisements has crowded in upon us, the junior member of our family has been unwell and kept us awake o' nights, we have learned of but few local items of interest, and we can't help it if the present issue of the Freeman is somewhat deficient in originality and spirit.

Our next door neighbor, John D. Thomas, has made up his mind to return to first principles in the boot and shoe trade, and after disposing of his present stock he will discontinue the sale of eastern-made work and confine himself to the legitimate business of manufacturing work which he can warrant in every particular. He has now a full force of workmen, and is prepared to fill all orders.

We have become so used to making excuses about our list of receipts that we almost feel sure our paper would not be appreciated without one. This week we have it in type, but the great stress upon our columns of Court and other advertisements, which must be published, has not only crowded it out, but, also a somewhat lengthy communication on "Equalization of School Taxes" and a general variety of news items, likewise in type. Sorry, but can't help it.

SPIRITED CASE OF LARCENY.—Davy Powell is a well-to-do Welsh farmer residing a few miles from our town. Like the rest of humanity, Davy has his weaknesses, prominent among which is a fondness for what is technically known as "tanglefoot." We do not know that Davy is an immoderate drinker, or that he "indulges" any more freely than thousands of others who would scorn the idea of being considered habitual drankards, but certain it is that he goes on the principle that a barrel of whisky is a good thing to have in the house, cow or no cow, and hence he supplies his spiritual wants by the wholesale when necessity demands or appetite craves the replenishing of his stock of "fire-water." In accordance with this custom, he received a barrel of whisky on Saturday last, and contracted with Tommy Thomas to transport it to its destination. Reaching the farm of Mr. John Hughes, a short distance from town, Davy Powell, jr., met the party, and prevailed on them to unload the "hepzine" and leave it at Mr. Hughes' barn until Monday morning, assigning as a reason that Mr. Powell's residence was too far distant for Mr. Thomas to wend his weary way thither and return to his own home that evening. The whisky was accordingly unloaded, and as it was thought, safely stowed away; when the several parties wended their ways to their respective homes. Time moved onward, as usual. Sunday evening came, and with it the owner of the whisky, to find that his treasure was still safe. Early Monday morning, the spot was again visited, with horse and wagon, for the purpose of transporting the barrel and its contents to its destination; when, lo! and behold! neither barrel, whisky, stave, nor hoop was to be seen, and, though the most indefatigable exertions looking to its recovery have been put forth, the precious fluid has not been even so much as heard from by its legitimate owner, let alone smelled or tasted, since. Some look upon it as an illustration of the principle of spontaneous combustion. Others take it to be an indication that there are those in the neighborhood who are not averse to stealing away, from every cumbering care, to spend the hours of setting day in getting on a "tare." On one point, all parties seem to be agreed—it is a clear case of "departed spirits."

P. S. Since the above was in type we understand that the defunct spirits have been resurrected—found hidden away among the underbrush in the vicinity, doubtless by some wags seeking to perpetrate a practical joke. A post mortem examination has probably ere this been made of the remains.

SPRING has come, the delicate-footed May,
With its slight fringes filled with buds and flowers:
And with it comes a wish to be away,
Wasting in woodlands the voluptuous hours.

With it comes also another wish, namely—to go to Shoemaker & Co's store and buy a bill of the elegant Spring goods which line their capacious shelves.

SPRING PURCHASES.

Grand Display of Goods at V. S. Barker's—Rare Bargains in Choice Articles.

Since the Spring trade recently opened, there has been an increased rush at V. S. Barker's Cheap Cash Store, Ebensburg, Pa. The reason is found in the fact that Mr. Barker has made a most successful effort to secure everything in his line at the lowest cash prices, so as to sell cheap, and while it is impossible for us to furnish our readers with a detailed list of the many articles Mr. Barker has for sale, we will endeavor to refer to a few of the most prominent, at the same time assuring our readers that the assortments are as complete as they can be made, and that at all times the different departments will continue to contain the choicest goods. Mr. Barker has just returned from the Eastern cities, where he has been purchasing goods, and has brought with him, not only the LATEST, but the largest stock of goods ever brought to Ebensburg. How well Mr. Barker aims to please his customers is best known by a glance over his splendid stock for Spring. Every article, from the least to the greatest, bears that air of neatness so essential to please the critical eyes of the ladies and the no less critical glances of the "lords of creation."—In fact, Mr. Barker has spared no efforts to make his establishment an emporium of fashion, and certainly he deserves to be appreciated, and is entitled to enjoy an immense trade, for no department has been slighted, but on the contrary each one has received special attention, and is replete with the best stock of goods in its line to be found in the entire country; and these goods, we repeat, are being sold at amazingly low prices for cash, and in some instances cheaper than the same goods could be had even in Philadelphia. We have heard some people complain that when they enter a place to buy goods, there was no opportunity for a choice on account of the scarcity of assortments. But this charge cannot be laid to Mr. Barker's establishment, but rather to the contrary, for it seems to us that we would be sorely puzzled to know what was best to buy, because the stock is so immense, and every part of it is so beautiful and desirable. In Dress Goods, all the newest and leading styles will be found in great abundance. We saw Alpacas in a l colors, both plain and figured; also, some things altogether new in figured Alpacas. Cobergs and Merinoes of all different colors. Wool Delaines, new styles and colors. Nice black Silks for dresses. Common Delaines and Calicoes in endless profusion. In White Goods, we saw Jaconets, Cambrics, plain, checked, and striped, Nainsooks, Brilliants, Swiss Mulls, Swiss Stripes, Victoria and Bishop Lawns, and White Pique, a new article for white dresses. While speaking of Dress Goods, we might mention Dress Buttons, which we saw in great variety, all the new styles. In Hoop Skirts, you will find a great variety of styles and grades. While on this side of the house, we stopped to examine the Cloths and Cassimers. Here are Cassimers of all styles and prices, for men's and boys' wear; while for cheaper wear, we saw Sattinetts, Jeans, Tweeds, and a full line of Cotton Goods, just the thing for summer wear. Here, if you wish to buy the cloth and make your own clothes, you can buy something that will be nice, cheap, cool, and desirable for summer. If you don't believe it, go and try, and we are sure you will be convinced that the place to buy goods is at V. S. Barker's.

GIPSIES.—Quite a large number of these irregular people were encamped for several days of last week on the side of the "Clay Pike," about half a mile west of town. Their encampment was a rare attraction over Sunday, and was visited by many of our citizens, who were curious to see the domestic habits of these unique beings In the midst of their little booths, formed of spruce boughs, seated by their fires, with their horses, dogs, and wagons around them, they appeared perfectly happy. To them, landlords, rate assessors, and tax collectors are a race unknown. To them, it is a matter of indifference who rules the country; whether Democrat or Republican, Jew or Greek; whether old Ben shall wade into the Presidency, or whether the constitutionally elected President shall serve out his term of office.

The Gipsies, or Gypsies, (either spelling is correct,) are emphatically "a peculiar people." They are found in every civilized country, and everywhere possess the same well-marked peculiarities. The term used among us is a corruption of the word Egyptian. In Italy, a Gipsy is called Zingaro; in Spain, Gitano; in France, Egyptien.—They at first represented themselves as Christians driven out of Egypt by the Mohammedans. It is now generally believed that they originally emigrated from India at the time of the Mohammedan invasion of Teinor Beg. It would be funny to hear of our modern Gipsies declaring themselves Christians persecuted for conscience' sake. They are not supposed to be thin-skinned on the question of religion. These people have figured extensively in our literature, from William Cowper and Walter Scott down to Sylvanus Cobb, jr.

USE THE BEST.—Blades' Euphonial Lubricators are a medical preparation in the form of a Lozenge, and are universally considered the most pleasant, convenient and effectual remedy in use for Hoarseness, Coughs, Colds, Croups, Catarrh, Asthma, Bronchitis, Diptheria, and all Pulmonary Complaints. They are WARRANTED to give quicker and more lasting benefit in the above affections than any other remedy. Also to contain no deleterious ingredient, and not to offend the weakest and most sensitive Stomach.

Blades' Constitution Pills are so called because of their peculiar effect upon the Liver, Stomach, Blood and Nervous System. For inactivity of the Liver, for the Stomach in derangement, or Dyspepsia, they will delight the patient with their mild and beneficial effect, especially if after long continued indigestion and costiveness, they are left with periodical returns of the Sick Headache. In case of a severe cold, producing Chills and Fever, you can break it very soon by using the Pills as per directions with each box. JOHN H. BLADES & CO.,

DEMOREST'S ILLUSTRATED MONTHLY.—This periodical has risen from being a mere Gazette of Fashion, to the position of the popular parlor magazine. Ladies who take it think "the world of it," as their phrase is, and are quite sure they could not get along without it. Confessing our ignorance of those points which would enable us to do entire justice to its merits, we may freely admit that it is most carefully and conscientiously conducted, that its literary tone is far superior to the general run of parlor periodicals, that its range of topics includes nearly all interesting to women, that its information upon household subjects is complete and reliable, and its authority indisputable. Moreover, its patterns alone are worth double the cost of the magazine. A large and unusually interesting amount of reading matter is promised for July, for country enjoyment. Three dollars yearly. Published by W. J. DEMOREST, 473 Broadway, N. Y.

MARRIED.

OATMAN—M'DERMITT—In this place, on Tuesday, 12th inst., by Rev. R. C. Christy, Dr. J. J. Oatman, of Carrolltown, and Miss Regenia H., eldest daughter of Col. B. McDermitt, of Cambria township.

We are exceedingly surprised, astonished, dumb-founded. We don't know whether to congratulate one of the most popular, wholesouled and deserving gentlemen in the county upon his success in securing so amiable, accomplished and charming a wife as our young friend Jennie, or to congratulate ourself on having been made the recipient of such a beautiful and valuable memento of those good old Democratic days when gold and silver jingled in our pockets (not to a very alarming extent, however,) and greenbacks, stamp duties, and other blessings (?) of a like character were unknown throughout the land. But while we are in this delightful state of uncertainty let us endeavor to describe our present, and then our friends and brethren of the press can determine whether such a man as the generous donor does not deserve to be blessed—yea, doubly blessed—in his lately assumed prerogatives as husband. The coin is of the same size and shape as a three cent piece, is of bright golden color; it bears upon one side a counterfeit presentment of the head of the Goddess of Liberty, adorned with a cap bearing the proper legend and encircled by thirteen stars, and underneath the figures "1854."—On the reverse is an eagle rampant, surrounded by the words "United States of America," and underneath the legend, "2½ D." If memory serves us right, this coin was known in our younger days as a TWO-DOLLAR—AND—A—HALF—GOLD—PIECE!—And now, dear Doctor, may God bless you and your fair young bride with His choicest blessings and may your golden wedding, fifty years hence, find you both as happy, contented and prosperous as our greetings this day find you in the early hours of your matrimonial felicity.

MYERS—STORM.—At Summitville, on Tuesday, 5th inst., by Rev. Thos. Ryan, Mr. Gabriel Myers and Miss ——— Storm, both of Gallitzin.

Our happy young friends have our thanks for the delicious cake accompanying the above announcement. May no storm of adversity ever buffet their matrimonial barque in its voyage down the stream of life, and when the other Gabriel sounds his trumpet over the land may it awaken them to an immortality of glory in the haven of eternal rest.

DIED.

DEVER.—At his residence in Munster township, on Saturday, the 9th inst., Neal Dever, aged 84 years.

The subject of the above notice was born in the County Donegal, Ireland, from whence he emigrated about the year 1818. He arrived in Cambria county when it was little better than the habitation of wild beasts. Soon after, as a contractor, he was one of the men who pushed the Huntingdon and Pittsburgh turnpike to its completion. He soon after settled in the woods, near what is now Munster, where, by his untiring industry, he made for himself and family a happy home, where he spent the remainder of his days, loved and esteemed by all with whom he associated. To those who weep over his vacant seat he leaves the gratifying assurance that he lived and died an examplary Christian.—His remains were followed, on the 11th inst., to their final resting place by a large concourse of mourners. Peace to his ashes.

SOMEWHAT EMBARRASSED.—A young lady stepped into one of the street cars the other day, and dropped her handkerchief upon a vacant seat, as much as to say "taken," while she advanced to the other end of the car to deposit her fare. Meantime a nicely dressed young man jumped in and sat down on the handkerchief without observing it. The young lady, after paying her fare, turned back, discovered to her chagrin her seat was occupied, and sat down opposite, ladies making room for her. But she did not desire to lose her handkerchief, so she looked intently toward the place where she had left it, hesitating whether to ask for it or not. Discovering the direction of her looks, all eyes on the opposite side of the car were soon bent on the young man. Finding himself the object of so much attention, he himself looked, and discovered to his horror something white on which he sat, the end peeping out. He mistook its character. To cover it with his hand, and to tuck it nicely away, was the work of a few moments. None in the car but the young lady knew that the "something white" was a handkerchief, and hesitating still more to ask him, she lost it.

VALUABLE RECIPE.—At the present high price of butter, the following recipe will doubtless be very acceptable. A writer who says that his cow gives all the milk that is wanted in a family of eight persons, and from which was made 200 pounds of butter in the year, gives the following as his treatment. He says: "If you desire to get a large yield of rich milk, give your cow, three times a day, water slightly warm, slightly salted, in which bran has been stirred at the rate of one quart to two gallons of water. You will find, if you have not found this by daily practice, that your cow will gain 25 per cent. immediately under the effect of it, and she will become so attached to it as to refuse to drink clear water, unless very thirsty; but this mess she will drink almost any time, and ask for more. The amount of this drink is an ordinary pailful each time—morning, noon and night. Your animal will then do her best at discounting the lacteal fluid. Four hundred pounds of butter are often obtained from good stock, and instances are mentioned where the yield was even a ta higher figure."
